Madison Avenue Quality at Factory Prices!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major department stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also known as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Brendan Snively III Drives From North Haven To Sag Harbor Without The Bridge

By Dan Rattiner

Late last Saturday night, Brendan Churchill Snively III, became the first person of the new millennium to drive from North Haven to Sag Harbor over the Sag Harbor channel. It was a feat worthy of Evel Knievel.

The actual jump took place at a quarter past three Sunday morning, but the inspiration for it came around nine o'clock Saturday when Snively, who is a regular, showed up at the Chequit Inn bar in Shelter Island Heights. This bar has become the center of social activity here on Shelter Island in the off season — there's a lot of singing, drinking, dart throwing and three different televisions at various points of the room showing hockey, basketball and wrestling.

Snively and some of the others got to talking about what a shame it was that they tore down the old Sag Harbor channel bridge before they could get a new one up to take its place. The old bridge had served the community quite well since it was constructed as a WPA project during the 1930s and the bridge being down certainly was an inconvenience not only for Shelter Islanders but levelheaded since he drinks only Coke-Cola and Virgin Marys, said that 400 feet was nothing really and that he could jump it easily on his Harley Davidson which was parked outside.

This comment was greeted with gales of laughter by those present who said there was no doubt that anybody could jump it on a motorcycle, the real issue is whether you could jump it in a car.

Snively said he could do that too.

Snively has only been a regular at the Chequit since October when he unexpectedly came out to Shelter Island to stay at his family's summer cottage. Although he has something of a wild streak, Snively is a popular young man and many people had seen him off in late August for his last year in military school and said they would miss him over the winter but would be sure to catch up with him the following summer.

for residents of North Haven. The whole width of the channel there was only 400 feet. You'd have thought they would have planned it a whole lot better.

Fox TV News Anchor John Roland, will be the Master of Ceremonies at the Dan's Papers Art Exhibition and Silent Auction to benefit the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on May 13. The event last year, at which more than fifty Dan's Papers cover artists donated their work, raised over $30,000. Starr Boggs of Westhampton Beach will do the catering and the honorary chairs include Adair and Bill Beutel, Roy Scheider and his wife Brenda Seimer.

The thirty-five or forty million dollars paid by Jerry Seinfeld for Billy Joel's house on the beach in Amagansett may well be the most paid for a private residence in the state. The New York Times noted last week the thirty million dollars that was paid by Steven Schwartzman, President of the Blackstone Group Investment Firm for Saul Steinberg's thirty four room castle in the sky above Park Avenue was a record in the city, eclipsing the old mark, paid by Martin Zweig for a penthouse apartment at the Pierre Hotel a year ago. That amount was $21.5 million.

The polo ponies will soon be making the scene here in the Hamptons. In the meantime, they're down in Palm Beach where polo playboy Neil Hirsch held several parties, one of them at his restaurant The Player's Club which included as guests among others, Tommy Lee Jones, Stephanie Seymour and Peter Brant. A second party originally attributed to him, a very risqué affair at the Palm Beach Polo and Country Club that included strippers, was actually hosted by Sidelines magazine.

Wilbur L. Ross, Jr. of Southampton, who recently started his own investment firm, has started things off with a bang by placing, along with a partner, a $15 million dollar bet on bankrupt Planet Hollywood the restaurant that is home to Batman, Darth Vader, Cleopatra and Julius Caesar.

Susan Lucci of Westhampton, helped hang the caricature drawn of her on the wall of Sardi's restaurant joining the others there. She's being honored for her star turn in Annie Get Your Gun.

Seen at Bay Street Theatre, "Cabaret Night" were Jerry and Adrian Cohen enjoying a polished performance by Helen Schneider. They have been traveling extensively this past year abroad but are happy to be settling again into their Shelter Island retreat for the upcoming summer season.

Elaine Stritch and the Potluck Players will be reading Broadway Writers, author Edward Padula's six characters in search of a play on Friday, April 14, to benefit Frazer Dougherty's new LTV Media Center, which is just opening. The reading will be at Canio's book store in Sag Harbor.

The gentle exploration of a mentally disturbed young couple, groping for places in the world~ remains one of the best films on the subject. Performances by the lead couple are marvelous.

Short: 1994 Artists Writers Game

April 22nd ~ Last Summer

Exceptionally strong story of the trials of teenagers playing out explosive games of sexual awakening and status on local beaches. Provocative and jarring, its original X rating has been edited for an R.

Short: Out of the Attic

April 29th ~ Masquerade

A taunting romantic suspense thriller of an ambiguous young man's ambitions and the wealthy wife he might have married for her dowry. Beautiful people and likewise beautiful, close-by locations, highlight the dark plot.

Short: Nice

May 6th ~ Amistad

Based on a true story, the movie chronicles the incredible journey of a group of enslaved Africans who are trying to get back to their beloved homeland. They take over the Amistad which gets seized by US authorities off Montauk and brought to Connecticut where they are charged with murder & imprisoned to await their fate. A very emotional movie and well acted.

Short: Shoto-Kan Karate-do

May 13th ~ The Dain Curse

Fittingly adapted from an early Dashielle Hammett novel, this well produced, film version is crammed full with the smoking-gun intrigue of The Maltese Falcon author.

Short: 1994 Artists Writers Game (Encore)

May 20th ~ Grey Gardens

This somewhat shocking documentary actually remains compellingly poetic and touching. It captures a small portion of the later years of Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter, Edie (aunt and cousin of Jacqueline Onassis), filmed in their decaying, over grown mansion in East Hampton. Once seen, Edith and Edie, will not soon leave you.

Mercedes

Snively's return, which he said his father and mother knew nothing about, occurred because as he put it, he and the military academy had had some differences. He had been coming to the Chequit literally every night ever since.

Part of the reason for the reaction that Snively's comment got at the Chequit is because he had often bragged about a job he had two summers ago working in the entourage of Michael Knievel, the son of Evel Knievel when Micheal had done his successful dare devil leap of Grand Canyon.

Although just fifteen, Snively said, Kinevil had several times allowed him to use the motorcycle himself and take some fledgling jumps over six or seven cars in parking lots in the nearest town to the canyon.

Now Snively left the Chequit and returned about twenty minutes later in his father's Mercedes. Like many summer residents of the Island, Mr. Snively Sr. keeps a car on his property with the keys in it for whatever guests might come and care to use it. This was about 10 p.m. Within the next half hour Snively had found more than a dozen people willing to bet him fifty dollars that he couldn't get the Mercedes up and over to the other side before morning.

Snively also found two people amongst the group who believed he could do it and would do what ever it took to make it happen. First of all, it was decided that the attempt should take place between three and four in the morning, long after all the restaurants and bars in Sag Harbor are closed but before the early birds start coming to work at dawn. Secondly, it was decided to move the pieces of the skateboard ramp that the Brostows had constructed for their two teenagers in Shelter Island Heights down to the launch site. The caretaker had already disassembled the skate board ramp for the winter – the pieces had been stacked in the Carriage House – in fact, by the caretaker, who was there at the bar to tell everyone so and it shouldn't be any great problem.

Meanwhile Snively went on ahead, since the last ferry from Shelter Island would leave at 11:30. He wanted to inspect the site and spend at least three hours walking around judging the angles and distances. Word spread rapidly throughout Shelter Island of the upcoming Snively Attempt but at no time did any of the local authorities, the Shelter Island, North Haven or Sag Harbor police know anything about it until later. At three o'clock in the morning about two hundred people assembled on the North Haven side of the channel and about seventy-five people on the Sag Harbor side, including this reporter. I had learned about it around 10:30 after coming out into the night from the Bay Street Theatre where I had watched a wonderful Cabaret performance by singer Helen Schneider. There was a message on my cell phone, which of course I had turned off during the performance; it was from a friend of mine, a bartender at the Chequit who thought I might be interested. He told me I ought to be on the Sag Harbor side with a photographer by 3 a.m.

I drove home back to East Hampton, made a call to a Dan's Papers photographer, put on some heavy clothes – it was raining with thunder and lightning from time to time – and on top of that put on a yellow slick. I was back in Sag Harbor, cell phone at the ready, at ten minutes to three; I parked down at the Seven-Eleven and waited. I drank a 16 oz. cup of Seven-Eleven coffee with Irish crème in it, I read USA Today from cover to cover and I read a couple of magazines.

At 3:30 my cell phone rang again and it was my friend on the other side telling me to get out where I could get the best possible view, that it would all take place within five minutes. The rain had stopped but there was still lightning over the Sag Harbor jetties. I put on my rain hat and walked out to where Route 114, Bay Street and Main Street come together.

Less than a hundred feet up the street from here, there are big concrete barriers that would have to be cleared. I stationed myself around the back of the big wooden windmill leading out to Long Wharf. It wouldn't be much protection if the Mercedes hit it dead on, but it was all I could think of.

Sag Harbor downtown was completely deserted at that hour except for the small group who had assembled there. There wasn't a car on the road or even a pedestrian on the sidewalk. The roads were wet, a crescent moon darted in and out among the clouds, and it was quite windy. Then from the

From The Plane To The Train To The Bus To The Shuttle To Downtown East Hampton

By Dan Rattiner

Slowly but surely, the Village of East Hampton is moving toward a time when cars will be banned from the downtown village. Someday, to go to East Hampton Village, you'll go somewhere else, park your car, and public transportation will take you there. It may not be so bad.

The slow shift in this direction began about ten years ago, when people began fighting over parking spaces in the summer time. There was famous brawl as I recall that actor Peter Boyle got involved in, in front of the Amagansett Farmers Market. You'd be backing in and somebody would sneak in behind you and come in frontward. All hell would break loose. There just weren't enough parking spaces.

The village responded by hiring brownies, those summer college cops who brandish chalk on a stick to get the cars to obey the two-hour limit. The brownies had some effect but it wasn't enough. The motorists would argue with the brownies who, not armed with weapons, were limited in the ways they could control the tougher customers. Furthermore, they could only work on nice days; when it rained the chalk would wash off the tires. Marking the tires wearing yellow rain gear was a miserable and thankless task.

Five years ago, the village tightened the screws further by putting signs in the middle of the street reading, "Stop when pedestrians step into the crosswalk." People would step out into the crosswalk. The cars would stop.

It was at this point that somebody in village government remembered that they had bought a large 400 car parking lot way up in "North Dakota," as they called it, a place that was too far to park there was also almost no promotion to tell people what it was about (East Hampton Village takes a low key approach to things), people just watched it go by thinking there was a home for the handicapped that they didn't know about up in that part of town and since the bus was empty, there was nobody going out that day.

OK, there was some promotion. The bus had a picture of a small windmill on the side and under it said, "Lumber Lane Shuttle." Nobody had a clue.

Through it all, the merchants offered very little in the way of help to alleviate the parking situation. With only rare exceptions, they would arrive very early in the morning, park their cars in front of their stores or in the spaces in the back, roll down the store awnings, open the front doors and go inside and wait.

Now wouldn't you think that if the people who drive into town to do the shopping report that they go in, circle around twenty times and then come back home without buying anything, that the merchants might put this all together? Apparently not.

In the early days of the lot up in North Dakota, the merchants, perhaps rightly, figured that they didn't want to park there and then have to brave rain, sleet, snow and wind to get to the front doors of their stores. I suppose they might have used when using the railroad station and also too far to park when using downtown. Why not put in a shuttle bus? Suddenly, what originally had looked like a crazy and stupid purchase, now seemed brilliant. And so, four years ago, this bus began making slow lazy loops between this parking lot (now called the Lumber Lane lot), the railroad station, Newtown Lane, Main Street and Guild Hall and then back again.

There was no charge to use this bus but since the Lumber Lane lot during the last four years but nobody ever really told them about the bus. Furthermore there was no bus shelter they could stand in when it rained.

This fall the village fathers decided to rethink this whole situation. At the two entrances to the main parking lot downtown, they have installed ticket vending machines. Very soon, when these machines are activated, you will drive up to them and, whether you like it or not, see the machine stick a little yellow ticket out at you. You take it and put it on the dashboard of your car. The ticket, time stamped, is good for two hours at the parking lot, whether you're a store owner or not.

What if you don't take the ticket? Without a yellow ticket on the dashboard, you get a summons right away. The village is getting serious. There's this two hour limit. The village is determined to win the parking war.

On the other hand, sometimes on your way to winning a war, you'll lose an occasional battle. The signs in the middle of the street no longer read "Stop when a pedestrian steps into the crosswalk." They read, "State Law: Stop For Pedestrians In Your Half of Crosswalk." Apparently, a motorist, probably a city person with a law degree, challenged the complete stop from both sides declaration with a lawsuit about the correct law being only one half of the crosswalk at a time. New signs were installed.

As far as the shuttle bus was concerned, the village has now hired the Hampton Jitney to liven things up. The Jitney, which does great marketing, will run the shuttle bus and in conjunction with the village, offer free prizes to people who use the shuttle bus a great number of times. Shuttle bus riders will be given a bus card the first time when they get on and they can get the card punched stamped for each time they use it. Collect ten punches with ten stamps in them and you get a free one way trip into New York City or a free coffee and donut at Dreesen's - they're still working on all the prizes.

Of course, riding the shuttle bus back and forth to the Lumber Lane lot is free, so it's possible for people who haven't got a life to spend all day riding the bus around and around, back and forth, accumulating one prize or another as time goes on.

The outside of the bus is to have a new logo and a new paint job and according to Larry Cantwell, the village manager. Though as of this date, April 10, they haven't decided on a design.

When I spoke to Larry, I suggested they paint both sides of the bus with a landscape scene of the East Hampton wetlands, perhaps commissioning Priscilla Bowden. Larry said maybe they'd just make the whole bus a giant striped bass. You'd enter through the mouth.

"Have people send your newspaper suggestions," Larry said.

I told him that was a great idea. The address is P.O. Box 630, Bridgehampton, New York 11932. Send your suggestion before April 20. In any case, I suggested whatever is decided upon, there ought to be an unveiling.

"That's also a great idea," Larry said.

"Yes," I said. "You could get one of those boat covers or car covers and then pull it off at the exact moment and everybody would cheer. They call it a photo op."

There still isn't a bus shelter up at the Lumber Lane lot however and I told Larry I thought that might be a good idea for rainy weather. Larry said they're probably going to shorten the route a bit so that the shuttle passes any particular spot with a greater frequency. It will be around every twelve minutes.

The real estate agents say that East Hampton right now is the hottest town going and everybody wants to be here and everybody wants to park here. But the pressure is building in Southampton Village and even in Westhampton Beach Village and there have been discussions about a shuttle bus.

I noticed that on Southampton Main Street, the old East Hampton sign that read, "Stop when pedestrians step into the crosswalk," has been set up. East Hampton has apparently sold them this bill of goods is my guess since they can't use it anymore themselves, but it's a start.

Someday, East Hampton will be like Disney World. You'll park out in the North Dakota parking lot which will be expanded a hundred times over and you'll have to remember where you park like Goofy 7, only it will be Alec Baldwin 12 or Martha Stewart 14 and you'll walk the fifty yards to the waiting shuttle bus and be transported to the Emerald City. I can hardly wait.

Why Daniel Patrick Moynihan Should Not Retire: Part II

By Dan Rattiner

Three weeks ago I wrote an article entitled, "Part One: Why Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan should not retire." And I gave my reasons why I couldn't vote for Hillary Rodham Clinton. As a result I was lambasted by the supporters of Mrs. Clinton, which accounts for about half of the population of New York State. And so this week I am writing Part Two of why I don't want Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan to retire – in which I explain why I can't vote for Rudolph Giuliani. Now I can get lambasted by the other half of the population.

Mayor Giuliani is, how shall I put this? Well, a bolt of fear just went through me as I thought about what I was going to say, because sometimes I don't think good thoughts about the mayor and it wouldn't be good if he didn't like it.

So what I have to say is, Mayor Giuliani is a very nice man. He is slender and attractive and has a nice white smile. He has a nice brisk walk and a happy go lucky way about him because he knows what's best for the City of New York and he knows that we know that he knows what's best for the city. So it all works out just fine.

The mayor has been tough on crime. He will gladly tell you that when he came into office, the place was a den of sex, sin and thievery and now everything is cleaned up and people can walk down unrequested windshield cleaning is down all over the city.

Personally it reminds me of what Stalin did in Russia. When he came into power, crime was rampant. Get a little tough on criminals, put a little fear into everybody and look what can happen.

That crime is down in almost every other major city in the United States, even the ones where they have bleeding heart liberals for mayors, does not change what Giuliani has wrought.

And the fact that the police chief in power when the changes took place, Chief Brattin, claims to have proposed all of the changes himself (he later got a big fat book contract to write about it and resigned), doesn't change what Giuliani has done either.

Giuliani knows the good guys from the bad guys, that's for sure. When Yasser Arafat came to JFK in order to make a speech at the U.N., it was Giuliani who wouldn't let him into the city. When

...a special law should be passed for Mayor Giuliani that given all the fine things he has done, he... be retired on triple pension...

the street free of any fear.

OK, so maybe a few innocent people got caught up in the dragnet or got riddled with bullets or something, and certainly that is a very sad thing, especially for the families, but the truth is that murders are down and burglaries are down and muggings and robberies are down and even

Giuliani (Continued from previous page)

New York magazine ran an ad campaign on the sides of city buses that put the mayor in a bad light, it was Giuliani who had the city cancel the magazine's bus advertising contract. There would be no freedom of speech sneaking into the city while he was in charge.

And Giuliani has been as tough on art as he has been on writing. When a museum in Brooklyn announced they would be exhibiting a show that contained some paintings the mayor objected to, Giuliani reminded the museum that the city was the landlord. The paintings came anyway, and the mayor served eviction papers. You don't fool around with Rudy Giuliani.

The mayor is also tough on academia. He is fully aware that government documents must be released to people who are doing legitimate research. But if reporters or academics are looking for information that might provide them with facts that don't support Giuliani's positions, he files lawsuits to stop them. Researchers and reporters must only be search only for the truth that Giuliani knows to be so.

There are people who say that Giuliani is little more than a tyrant, but defenders of the mayor rightly state that there has not been one case where the mayor has brought tanks out into the streets or called a wing of fighter bombers in for a strafing run. It is also certainly true that in spite of everything, all the major New York City magazines, newspapers, radio and TV stations, are still in business. Explain that!

Mayor Giuliani has done a terrific job on the City of New York. In fact, it's so good, he can leave as mayor knowing that his job is done, the economy is restored to health, that citizens can walk the streets safe from fear and people can still have all their freedoms, although there are limits.

In fact, this article, which as I said is Part Two of Why I Think Daniel Patrick Moynihan Should Not Retire, is really about my belief that a special law should be passed for Mayor Giuliani, that given all of the fine things he has done during his two terms as mayor, he need go no further in his political career and be retired on triple pension in one of the upstate areas of the Catskills which, under Mayor Giuliani's protection, have continued to provide the city with an unadulterated and continuous supply of safe water.

It is for that reason and for that reason only that I am urging Senator Moynihan to consider not retiring. Spare Rudy, our beloved Mayor, from a nasty and bloody election campaign against the hated Mrs. Clinton.

Is that OK? Can I go now? •

Road Rage Rampant As Sag Harbor Traffic Calming Plan Hits A State Speed Bump

By Dan Rattiner

If you've been seeing grim faced motorists careening along back roads of Sag Harbor at high speed, you're probably seeing the officials of that village as they race from meeting to meeting trying to decide what to do about the latest ultimatum from the State of New York.

Sag Harbor is participating in a traffic calming experiment. Residents have complained for some time that the village seems highly susceptible to road rage. People racing through town to catch the ferry to Shelter Island, people racing through town using Sag Harbor as a bypass to get from Southampton to East Hampton without battling all the traffic on the Montauk Highway.

It wasn't always thus. Sag Harbor 150 years ago was a thriving whaling port with more than 100 ships berthed at Long Wharf and a Customs House to rival the one in New York City. Some felt that Sag Harbor as a port of entry might someday even exceed in size the Port of New York, since in the 1900's you could disembark in Sag Harbor and then take a high-speed train into the hinterlands of America faster than staying on the boat to the Statue of Liberty.

Well, it has come to this. The whaling industry died out, the Port of Entry closed up, the pride of Sag Harbor, the eighty-five foot tall steeple of the Presbyterian Church, which was the tallest structure on Long Island fallen down in 1938 and now the village for all its charm and restoration is worried that it just might be a speed bump on the way to the ferry, or East Hampton or Southampton.

The New York Department of Transportation worked hand in hand with the village officials for more than a year coming up with imaginative ways to get cars going through Sag Harbor to slow down. What a novel idea. Instead of straightening and widening roadways to speed the traffic from point A to point B, now officials could dare to come up with ways to do exactly the opposite.

They'd put in center-islands and plant in them wild flowers; they'd build pedestrian crossings with zebra stripes in them so you had to stop your car to let somebody cross the street. They'd build curbing out of Belgium block and remove road shelters. Someone even suggested they construct a mock auto accident by the side of the road, complete with mannequins dressed as paramedics and police officers. They'd use old broken police cars. They'd have ambulances, put in flashing lights and flagmen. People always slow down out of curiosity and look at accidents - they call it rubbernecking. What an exhilarating idea. Missed the first ferry? Take the second.

Somewhere along the way however, the relationship between the state and the village got strained. The employees of the State DOT were trained professionals, people who had read books and taken exams and gotten degrees in traffic flow. The local village officials on the other hand were retired jewelers, restaurateurs and cesspool installation company managers. At one point when the complete project plan was almost finalized, the Village jumped the gun and, using highway traffic cones, installed a very amateurishly designed experimental roundabout at the corner of Main Street and Jermain Avenue where up until that time, traffic flow had been quite adequately managed by a traffic light. Now there were accidents on this corner and almost daily near misses and some of the residents living at the roundabout complained that because of how the traffic cones were positioned, it was almost impossible for them to back out of their driveways.

The roundabout was removed and the traffic light restored. Then just four weeks ago when it came time for Sag Harbor officials to sign their names to vote through the traffic calming plan, the members of the Village Board said they would only agree to do so if a proposed roundabout at the corner of Main Street and Route 114 were eliminated from the plan. They said that this roundabout was only an invitation for motorists who wanted to bypass the Montauk Highway going from Southampton to East Hampton, and so they sent the plan back to the State DOT, unsigned with this demand attached. State DOT Director Craig Siracusa responded quickly in a letter saying that this roundabout at 114 and Main was the cornerstone of the entire project and if the Village refused to accept it, then the DOT would cancel the $4 million dollars worth of other traffic calming projects. The State DOT would eliminate Sag Harbor Village from the traffic calming program and Sag Harbor could finance the entire project itself, if it so desired to continue.

A meeting of CONPASH, which stands for Coalition of Neighborhoods for the Preservation of Sag Harbor held a meeting prior to the Village Board meeting last Tuesday. Anger flared.

David Lee who used to own the village jewelry store said, "This is blackmail."

Others raised similar objections. On Tuesday afternoon, local officials and residents got in their cars and roared to Village Hall to express further dismay over DOT developments. Cooler heads prevailed however, and it was decided to ask for a meeting with the DOT to discuss what criteria could be used to remove the roundabout at 114 and Main, should the Village agree to have it built.

That meeting is pending. Residents of Southampton and East Hampton and Shelter Island are urged to avoid Sag Harbor during this difficult period as the anger of the local residents and officials is at a fever pitch and road rage is the order of the day. Watch these columns for further developments.

other side of the channel we heard the unmistakable sound of a car engine growing louder and louder. Then there was a thump. The car had apparently hit the skateboard ramp. Now we all looked up and there was a sight that I will never forget. There was Mr. Snively Sr.'s battleship grey Mercedes was hurtling silently through the air in a great arc, its front wheels slowly lifting until I could see its extreme underside with its exhaust and muffler and axles.

It came across the channel high over the construction, the nose still rising, until it hit with a slight bang the top of one of the construction cranes in the middle of the channel. In slow motion, the crane fell sideways, away from the bridge construction, in a splash in the channel itself.

Snively, meanwhile, held tight to the wheel. The Mercedes was clearly way out of position, its rear wheels down, and its front wheels high, as if it were a show horse, toddling along on its hind legs.

It cleared the concrete barriers. Now it came down and landed, its two rear wheels hitting hard on the asphalt approach to where the bridge had been on the Sag Harbor side. Now the front wheels came down, slamming on the pavement with a bang.

Snively, strapped inside and wearing what looked like a Laser Tag helmet, wrestled the car to a halt just six feet in front of the Corner Bar and everyone ran over cheering and screaming. He had won his bet.

At that moment, the photographer from Dan's Papers pulled up in a Jeep Cherokee, jumped out and asked, "Am I too late? I couldn't find batteries for my flash."

He shall remain nameless for the rest of this article. I thought I would kill him. Snively was helped from the car by some of the excited onlookers and after staggering about for a bit, agreed to answer some questions.

How did he feel? Terrific. He'd like to do it again. Did the car function the way he had hoped it would? As a matter of fact, he would do it again, he said. His parents would be spending the entire month of May in Italy. He would do it again on a Saturday night at which time he would have the biggest party anyone had ever seen at his parents house.

"Everyone will be invited," he said. "I'll let you know the date. We'll put it in Dan's Papers. It's my favorite newspaper."

Seized Church Land

Seventy-One Years Ago, It Was Turned Over From One Church To Another

By Steve Braverman

The church of All Angels was built in Shinnecock Hills in 1894. On April 3, 1905 it burned to the ground, leaving nothing standing but a stone marker placed irreverently askew on unlevelled ground stating the above facts. In 1992 the town of Southampton was reassessing the area for tax purposes and came upon this vacant, 2.8 acre parcel of land that was not on the tax rolls. A title search revealed that this land was deeded to the Church of All Angels which according to the New York Department of State is still on the books as an active religious corporation.

Land owned by religious organizations that is not used for religious purposes is taxable, so the land was placed back on the tax rolls and tax bills were sent to the site of the church on Canoe Place Road, the last known address of the Church of All Angels. Since that address had been recorded about 115 years ago, and no structure has stood there in 95 years, nobody received the bills and they were returned to the town "No such addressee," as were certified letters sent by the county. As a result, the land was seized for nonpayment of taxes by the county in 1995.

A little over three years later, in 1999, it was sold to Alexandros Demetriades - who has applied to the town to sub-divide and develop the land - for $130,000.

St. John's Episcopal Church on South Main Street in Southampton then filed a lawsuit against John C. Cochrane, the Suffolk County Treasurer, claiming that they were in fact the rightful owner of the land, and that the county did not notify County News, in August of 1994 and the local newspaper of the area, The Southampton Press for two weeks in 1993.

According to New York State law, all religious organizations must register with the state as religious corporations, which both St. John's and All Angels did. However, the merger between the two churches was never recorded legally by the state and therefore did not happen in the eyes of the state. St. John's says that the merger was "well known throughout the town of Southampton." According to Peter Wronsky, the senior warden of the church, "any real estate man in town would know [who owned the land]."

The merger between the two churches was not realized by the state because of the manner in which it was done. In a letter sent to vestrymen (the governing body of the church) dated April 16, 1929, a meeting was called for April 29 that year. It was suggested that, "the most effective way to transfer it [the property] seems to be to have the present vestry of All Angels' Church resign one by one, and the present vestry of St. John's Church be elected one by one in their stead, thus putting the two institutions in the

them that their land had been reassessed. According to St. John's, the Church of All Angels merged with their congregation in the spring of 1929, and therefore all the holdings of that church were in fact possessions of St. John's.

According to the county, legal notices stating the reassessment and land seizure were run every other week for six weeks in the official newspapers of the county, The Smithtown News and The Suffolk

Another letter, from Thomas H. Barber an attorney, to Reverend Samuel Fish, dated April 29, 1929, reported that the meeting had been held at 1:00 p.m. that day. The results were that, "All Angels' Church now have almost the same vestry as St. John's."

Barber continued, "All Angels' Church is now in our hands without any bloodshed, without any merger, and without trouble. Nobody can get it away from us and no legal work has to be done till the Summer when I will have more time."

No further correspondence from Mr. Barber was found.

The fact that the land did not legally belong to St. John's was never even considered by the vestry. They were under the assumption that the ownership of the land was undisputed. The transfer of All Angel's assets was recorded in the official minutes of the church, but never recorded with the state because, according to Wronsky, "The first generation [of the vestry] did not think they had to do anything, and the current generation assumed it had been done."

The actual existence of the church has been disputed according to a letter to the Town Planning Board from Laurence T. Joline. According to Joline, the church was designed by Stanford White, and was erected on land donated by his great uncle, Francis Key Pendleton. Joline also states that for about forty years following the 1905 fire that destroyed the building, an annual service was held on the site, and that in 1922 his parents were married on the site, "For the wedding,

St. John's in Southampton

the grass grown over the outline of the nave of the church was lined with cut cedars and the ceremony was performed on the original spot of the altar."

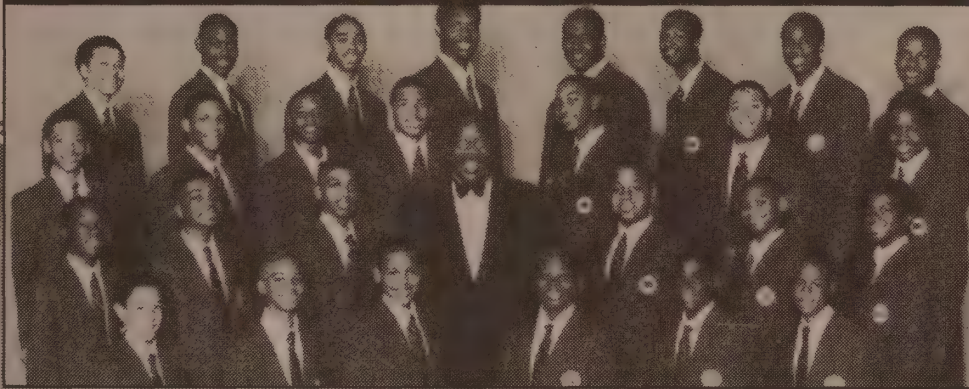

Another aspect of the situation is the possibility that a graveyard exists on the site, and thus the land is hallowed ground. A letter dated February 18, 1999 from Dr. Ronald B. Odrich of Hills Station Road, describes such a graveyard. "...I inspected the area myself and discovered that there were a number of overturned gravestones with worn and illegible inscriptions... In the fall of 1998 when the "For Sale" signs were posted on the property being discussed, I once again visited the site. This time I located the large stone but could not find any gravestones."

The lawsuit was found in favor of the county by the New York State Supreme Court based on the fact that the action by the church was over three years from the date of the sale, three years being the statute of limitations in this type of case. St. John's has filed a notice of appeal in the case.

Reverend Peter M. Larsen of St. John's states that the church derives no income from the land, and has no desire to sell it in the future. According to Larsen, offers have been made to St. John's to buy the land in the past, and all have been rejected. Currently St. John's has gone through considerable expense to attempt to reclaim their land, which Larsen says will be left as open space if they are successful.

The case will appear next before a New York State Appellant court. No date has been set, but according to Goggins it could be as long as two years. In the meantime, the land that Mr. Demetriades bought from the county is in limbo. If St. John's wins its appeal, the transfer of the land from the county to Mr. Demetriades will be set aside. So while he is free to do anything he wants with the land, he may have to relinquish it in the future. Mr. Demetriades could not be reached for comment.

Sacred Land?

Will the Courts Rule for the Shinnecoeks or the Developers in Land Dispute?

By Jerry Cimisi

Since midwinter the Shinnecock Nation of Southampton has been able to keep a developer, Parrish Pond Associates, from building a number of houses on a sixty-two acre parcel near the Shinnecock Reservation. The tribe first stymied the developers by simple blunt protest: in other words, by a number of the Shinnecock blocking bulldozers. State troopers arrested five people at a February 24 demonstration – four were Shinnecock, the other was longtime civil rights activist Bob Zellner, co-chairman of the Southampton Town Anti-Bias Task Force. Zellner contended that he and Shinnecock Doreen Arrindell were treated not too kindly by the troopers at their arrest.

The protesters face trials a few months down the road, but their efforts seemed to have had an immediate effect. They said the parcel was “sacred land” – and they engaged the help of two local attorneys. A New York State court granted the Shinnecoeks a preliminary injunction against the developer while attorneys for the Shinnecoeks and the developer could prove or disprove the claim that Southampton Town did or did not proceed properly in granting Parrish Pond Associates permits to develop the land.

In the middle of the 1800s, the Shinnecock Reservation totaled 3,600 acres. In 1859, the New York State Legislature reduced that to the present 800 acres: 750 acres in Shinnecock Hills and fifty in Hampton Bays.

Fred Thiele – who is also State Assemblyman for the East End – and Hermon Bishop of established in the late ‘80s, to contact any group of people or individual that would be connected to the property in question. But the architect for Parrish Pond Associates never did that. The Shinnecock would have obviously been a great deal of help to the archeologist in assisting with the evaluation.”

“I say this is a case of first impression – because nothing like it has been decided before. How does a township deal with a separate, sovereign nation?”

It has indeed been practice and policy on the East End for a town to do an archeological assessment of any land that appears to have historical value.

Mr. Bishop added, “Southampton Town in its prior practices always notified the Shinnecock Nation whenever there was a hint there were artifacts or burials on any land. That was done successfully in Water Mill and Flanders. There is also the problem that the archeological evaluation is done by an archeologist working for the developer. This to me is plainly a conflict of interest.”

In this case, the archeologist in question was Robert Kalin of Archeological Services of Rocky Point. Bishop said that Parrish Pond Associates came into possession of the sixty-two acres in 1996, “for around $20,000 an acre as I understand it. They stand to increase their investment tenfold.”

Land

Bishop added that Parrish Pond did acknowledge there was a very small portion of the site that is archeologically sensitive and should be left as it is – three tenths of an acre, certainly too little to satisfy the Shinnecocks and their supporters.

Bishop went on to say that the town's environmental appraisal of the land was "not in accordance with the Comprehensive Plan for Southampton Town. The parcel is forty-seven percent maritime heath land, a type of land that is almost nonexistent in New York State and which should be preserved."

Bishop referred to two letters sent to the Southampton Town Planning Board, one letter by Professor John A. Strong of Southampton College, an expert on Long Island's Native Americans and another by no less an expert, as Gaynell Stone, Ph.D., Director of the Museum of the Suffolk County Archeological Association.

Professor Strong wrote, "I have read the archeological report on the Parrish Pond Site and there are some important questions which the planning board needs to address. The first problem with the report is that the area where the wampum production appears to have taken place is not clearly identified on the site map. The activity areas appear to be much larger than the area recommended in the report for preservation."

Strong went on to say that the number of shovel probes recorded in the report fall far short of the number recommended by New York State for the excavation of a highly sensitive area." Also, Strong said, the boundary of the parcel "is not sufficiently established."

Strong's conclusion was that, "Until these matters are cleared up, the town should not allow the development of the parcel to continue."

Strong ended with, "The policy established in the attached agreement between the town and the Shinnecock Nation should be implemented."

Gaynell Stone, who edited a massive volume some years ago about the Montaukets, wrote that the Parrish Pond parcel was, because of its archeological and historical value, "eminently eligible for the National Register of Historic Places."

Gaynell pointed out that the site was also used by the Parrish family, which "also makes it unique."

She went on: "If it is a wampum-making site, it is doubly important, as none has been studied except for the debris of wampum production found at Ft. Corchaug and Fort Marspeage... It is possible that the placename "Fort Pond" indicates there was a native fort nearby... This site requires the stewardship of Town officials to insure that the area's richness is not destroyed through indifference."

Shinnecock Attorney Hermon Bishop spoke about a further dimension to the case. "Parrish Pond Associates says that because the Shinnecocks are a separate nation they should not be allowed to sue. This is a complicated issue. I say this is a case of first impression – because nothing like it has ever been decided on before. How in fact does a township deal with a separate, sovereign nation? Technically, only Congress can regulate Indian affairs, not the states."

There is also the matter that though New York State recognizes the Shinnecocks as a tribe, the federal government does not. The Shinnecocks as well as the Montaukets, are in the process of attempting to gain federal recognition.

Mr. Bishop said, "When you deal with American Indian law you often have to go back before the American Constitution, before the Articles of Confederation. Many of the tribes made treaties with England. There is also the point that an Indian nation does not have a leader with the same authority that an American president has. The Indians had and still maintain a democratic society. No individual Indian is obligated to abide by an agreement made by a chief."

By the time many of you read this, a New York State Supreme Court in Hauppauge may have already ruled on the preliminary injunction. The Shinnecocks and Parrish Pond Associates have a court date on April 14, before Justice James A. Gowan. If the injunction is left in place, it will still be up to the Shinnecocks and their allies to present a compelling enough case that the sixty-two acre parcel is of enough historic – and present day – importance to override any previous real estate dealings and town permits.

When this local controversy first arose, it looked like the Shinnecocks would be able to do little more than delay the inevitable. But, perhaps, they have more than a fighting chance to have the matter fall their way.

"The history of the Shinnecocks," said Mr. Bishop, "has had a good deal of tragedy. They once lived from Quogue to Montauk. They know this land in question is very important to them." •

play review: guys and dolls

By Christine Carroll

The Southampton Players rendition of Frank Loesser's Guys & Dolls, will be a tough act to follow. The Players held a spectacular performance at the Avram Theater of Southampton College's campus this past weekend. It was directed and choreographed by Michael Disher who has been with the Southampton Players for five seasons. The orchestra headed by Dan Koontz, was in the spirit of the night, all wearing hats to match the costume design of the play.

Hope Pulick in her second performance with the Southampton Players played Sarah Brown wonderfully. Her voice was angelic, and truly exhumed her character's emotions. Sarah and Sky Masterson's performance of the song "I'll Know" melted hearts. When she and Sky kissed romance was felt in the air.

However, when she finished their kiss by slapping him the audience's reaction was priceless. Sky Masterson, played by Chuck Novatka a Southampton resident, must still be feeling the aftermath of her hand across his face.

The accents everyone put on were outstanding. The way Southampton College senior Gemma Breithaupt played Miss Adelaide's character was brilliant. She was loved by all. Her great rendition of "A Bushel and A Peck" didn't skip a beat. "Adelaide's Lament" was truly funny and received many laughs. Her voice never strayed from her characters accent and she was obviously very comfortable in her role. Miss Adelaide's love interest Nathan Detroit was played by Tegue DeLeon, also a student at the college. He was extremely believable in his role as well. They both worked very nicely together. Michael Disher did a wonderful job on the costume designs. Their outfits captured the era so well. From head to toe he didn't miss a thing. The scenery designed also by Disher was simple yet exactly what was needed. The scenes that took place in El Café Cubana, Havana, made one feel like they were looking right into the nightclub windows.

The Southampton Players ranged from high school sophomores to a Calculus Professor. They all did a wonderful job on the stage and behind the scenes. Be sure to catch Guys & Dolls in its final performances this week, April 13, 14, 15, and 16.

The Sheltered Islander

Observations of a New Islander #101 Go, Cliff, Go!

Last week I wrote about our abominable North Ferry Line. And what shows up on the front page of our Shelter Island Reporter on the same day as that article? Cliff Clark, the President of the South Ferry Company, announced a third ferry service to start possibly as soon as Memorial Day 2001. Plus, he's adding a shuttle van service from the Orient ferry to Greenport! He's my knight in denim armor!

The new ferry service would take passengers from Greenport directly to Sag Harbor. How does that help to relieve the North Ferry Line you say? Look into the future, says I. Lots of people take both ferries to cut across from Greenport to Sag Harbor, so the "Sag-Port" ferry as I call it, gets them out of the line right away.

In time, Cliff will predictably trade in the passenger boats for car ferries. That gets more cars out of the line and many of the trucks as well.

This crossover population can have their own line and enjoy what will surely be a beautiful ride around our Island. We can all stand along Ram Island Road and moon, I mean, wave to them as they go by...

I'll be glad to see a lot of those big trucks go around the Island instead of cross over it. Everytime I watch a big truck get on the ferry, the ferry sinks down about three feet. The ferryman center the trucks in the middle to reduce the chances of the boat flipping over. Not possible you say? Next time you're in the bathtub playing with your boats, put a heavy rock in the middle of your soapdish, which is the same shape as a ferry, and check my theory.

I have the belief that the Bozzuto truck that delivers groceries to IGA, waits for me to leave for Greenport. He waits patiently in the parking lot until he sees me drive up, then all of a sudden, HE has to get on the boat.

It's a very big truck. The ferrymen always slick up its sides with vaseline so the rest of us can slide on. And instead of giving you a punched ticket, those wise guys give you a punched prayer card. I always pay a little extra to have a few more "Hail Mary's" punched out for good measure.

One of my favorite ferrymen is a delightfully funny guy who wears these gorgeous bead necklaces. It seems to me the North Ferry Company is missing a major business opportunity here. They could sell raffle tickets for those necklaces and take in an extra ten, maybe twelve bucks per boat... don't tell me I'm not a sharp business woman!

Some of the ferrymen are real cuties. They could raffle them off too. And sometimes, you can win home delivered sex from them, complete with bubble bath, champagne and candlelight dinner. If you can guess the number they're thinking of when they punch your ticket, you too could win! I know several women who've guessed the right number. Some get it right every time. I think they're psychic. I've never managed to guess the right number. I always guess "3" because that's my lucky number, but none of the ferrymen are ever thinking of "3" when they get to my car. Next week, I'm trying "7." Of course, I'm not sure if I'd remember what to do if I did win home delivered sex. I can't even remember if I'm supposed to ask for the money before or after...

I talked with one winner. She said it wasn't the experience she hoped for. She had to cook the dinner. He made the bubble bath with a shot of dish soap. She said she didn't know champagne now came with a twist off cap. And by the time she got out of the tub, the champagne was gone and her big prize was asleep on the couch...

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I don't understand why, "if you want to get something done in a hurry, you should ask a busy person." It doesn't seem to make sense but it does seem to ring true. People who are productive seem to be able to take on new projects. Being busy demands some level of organization. Delegating responsibility is key. "Networking" helps.

I sometimes find myself wondering why I have joined so many organizations and why the days seem too short. Granted I feel good about what

I'm doing and somehow it seems that one person can make a difference. Just when I feel really inadequate I go to a meeting and find that I know the people I need to talk to or those who have worked on a similar project and have something to bring to the discussion. I like to think that I'm not needed. I often feel like staying home but at the last minute pull myself together and sometimes come home feeling energized by an active evening out. Many of the best times come from contact with people who are "making a difference."

Last week I met up with my brother in Los Angeles. My brother lives in NYC. In the summer I have trouble getting into the city. My brother is always busy and when we do see each other we have to be aware of everyone else's needs. When he comes to the Hamptons, he is usually with his family and his dog. We have to be aware of everyone and everything. I'm usually a little over committed.

FIVE YEARS AGO

"In Favor of Sunsets"
April 14, 1995

Daylights Savings Time began last week. All over the Continental United States, with the exception of Arizona and a part of Indiana that does not believe in it, everybody turned all the clocks ahead one hour.

Increasingly, as we move farther and farther into this electronic age, this is a chore. I know couples who, on the appointed night, each start at opposite ends of the house and work toward the middle. Wall clocks, VCR, computer, travel alarm, wrist-watch, exercise machine, grandfather clock, laptop, another computer, kitchen stove clock and so forth and so on.

I am told that you can now buy electronic devices that, all by themselves, as if by magic, adjust themselves at the appropriate moment to Daylight Savings Time. Like most magic there is a trick to it. Though in this case the trick is magical. High in the sky there is a communications satellite with the ability to trigger changes in computer chips. The chips are placed in electronic devices and sold around the world. The satellite finds them and sets their clocks forward in the spring and backwards in the is saved.

Personally, I think we should always be on Daylight Savings Time. Every year the autumn comes, the days get shorter and I bitterly await the day when we are instructed to turn the clocks back. It makes no sense. In the summertime, the sun sets gloriously at eight o'clock at night. It is dinnertime and we sit over coffee discussing the day and watch as the sun and the earth do this incredible thing, sending orange, yellow and purple skyfires shooting across the heavens. If we have any sense we watch this with the sun setting over water.

Even in the autumn, the sunset makes a spectacular show in relationship to the dinner hour. As it sets earlier and earlier each day it moves into the main part of the meal and then to the beginning of the meal, almost announcing it and setting it up for candlelight.

By the end of October, the sun is setting at six in the afternoon and then, incredibly, they announce that you have to set the clocks BACK. Suddenly, in the middle of a busy business day, at maybe three thirty, the sun goes down unceremoniously and we continue the affairs of the world in the dark. Everybody gets depressed. People, tired from the day, now scramble to figure out how to get home. No wonder the suicide rate

The phrase "Daylight Savings Time" is, of course, a misnomer. The amount of daylight before and after Daylight Savings Time comes into effect is exactly the same. We just get up and go to sleep at different times in relationship to it. Nothing soars after the clocks are turned back.

As autumn comes and the fateful day approaches, I personally, as editor of this newspaper, have been moved to write articles pleading that this insanity we have inflicted upon ourselves be stopped. The explanations that I have heard to justify the return to regular time is that if we don't do it the cows can't figure out how to give milk and the children have to walk in the dark to go to school. I don't want to support anything that might endanger school children, do I?

Since complaining about this in the autumn a few weeks before we turn the clocks back has gotten me nowhere, I have decided to begin complaining about this here in the springtime when we have a full six months to think about the problem.

As for the cows, this business about there not being able to figure out when to give milk is ridiculous. The changing of the clocks back and forth is an artificial creation of man. You cannot look a cow in the eye and tell her that today we are turning the clocks back and we are turning the clocks ahead and expect this will have any meaning to her.

As for children, I suggest we give them an hour's grace. Instead of getting them up at seven to be in school by eight thirty, ring the first bell at nine thirty in the wintertime. Thus the children will go to school at a proper hour when they are fully rested, dressed, fed, organized and prepared. From what I can see from college boards and grammar school testing scores, the kids are not learning much in school anyway. Maybe they would do better if they worked at it for a shorter but more intense period of time.

As for the adults who would now be getting up in the dark to go to work, well, the experience will sharpen their senses. And if the sun rises as they go to work, which it will, they will see it as a cannon shot to get out there and kick some butt. And as for the argument that the adults will see less of the kids with this arrangement, all I can say is I do not know an adult in America who is civil and decent until at least one hour after they have consumed their first cup of coffee.

I have another suggestion, albeit a more selfish one. Here on the East End, where our entire year revolves around the summertime, it always seems strange that the changes in the times of the sunset are off center.

I will explain. One would think, with our summer resort season June, July, and August, that just as the summer weather seems to peak at the end of July, so the sun should, as a matter of balance, also set at its latest hour at the end of July.

Indeed, what it does do does not seem to make sense. The earth, tipped on its axis, circles the sun and there comes a time here in the northern hemisphere when we are closest to the sun and therefore subject to the strongest and hottest of the sun's rays.

This happens in June and we call it the summer solstice. But then, as the days start to get shorter and we move further from the sun, instead of cooling, the weather continues to warm. It does this for another thirty days.

Why this is I do not know. Perhaps the earth, retaining heat, takes a while before it figures out it ought to start cooling down. Just a thought.

In any case, my proposal is that we move our summer season to conform to the way the earth circles the sun. "Summer should begin on May 1 and end on August 1." Our longest day would be smack in the middle of the summer season with a crescendo leading up to it and an easing off beyond it. It would end what surely is, from a dramatic perspective, a really backwards situation where we start the summer season with the longest days, hit the solstice almost immediately and then get into the rhythm of summer season into the teeth of an increasingly disappointing series of shorter days.

Certainly we could do this. The days we set aside for school vacations and for the summer season are, after all, arbitrary.

I present these proposals at this time of year because I am aware that they are fairly complex. I want to give our lawmakers and bureaucrats to whom I am addressing these proposals, a full allotment of time to consider them, amend them, vote on them and sign them into law.

Arizona and that part of Indiana that won't go on Daylight Savings Time may have it backwards, but they have the right idea. Let's go into Daylight Savings Time and stay there.

So is he. In LA we had time to ourselves and even got to take a walk on the beach in Malibu. He had to go back into LA for an event in the evening and I have been acting like I have a mobile office. These are not really days off. With a laptop computer, I actually do have a mobile office.

Thank God we live in the computer age. E-mail makes traveling more possible and I realize it is time for me to get my own E-mail address. My stepdaughter will not send me pictures of her newborn baby until I get myself online. She is busy with her first born. With the aid of a digital camera and electronic mail, she has been in touch with everyone who is on the net. Making hard copy prints and going to the post office is simply not in the schedule.

Back to my point. If you want to get something done, ask a busy person. If you want to make things easy, get some labor saving devices. There is a lot to learn. The computer helps save time but it takes time to learn how to save time. There is a calendar contained in my computer and I find that many days are already double booked.

Be aware that the Southampton Hospital annual gala is scheduled for the night of August fourth. I have an opening at the gallery that night. I will simply try to be in two places at once. Two years ago there was a benefit for the Clintons the night of the Hospital party. It took a little doing but I managed to attend both. There was an opening at the gallery on that occasion, as well. My mom covered for me at the opening and we picked her up to head on to the Hospital party. She didn't find anything unusual about trying to attend two or three parties in an evening. I don't either.

My point is, do as much as you possibly can. Work, play, cook, work out, join committees, go to benefits, write a book and have some fun. It all works.

Especially For Couples Weekend

Recently we conducted an "Especially For Couples Weekend" at the Mohonk Mountain House Resort in New Paltz, New York. Filled with Old World charm the resort overlooks a large lake and is surrounded by acres of woods, streams and hiking trails. Seventy-five couples from around the tri-state area gathered to enjoy the natural beauty while also taking time out to make their marriages better.

These were not couples with troubled marriages. Quite the opposite. These were husbands and wives who liked being together, trusted each other and had managed to hold onto that illusive "in-love" feeling. Their ages ranged from early thirties to middle eighties, some were in second marriages. They were professionals, tradespeople, businessmen and women, even a rabbi. All shared a common value they considered their marriage relationship sacred.

Here are some important characteristics shared by these couples:

Trust and Commitment - These couples had no doubt about their level of commitment. The feeling that their partner was a best friend, a true and loyal supporter, ran strong among them. They had a complete trust in one another. They felt safe in each other's company. There was no pretense or game playing between them. Each partner felt they had space to be themselves without coercive or controlling efforts by their mate for them to be different. This is an important dimension of trust, that neither will attempt to control the other.

In couples where marital problems are common control is a major issue. Many husbands and wives get caught up in needing to be right or having the last word. Being one up is no substitute for feeling truly loved.

Good Sex - A majority of the husbands and wives said that a mutually satisfying sexual relationship was central to their being happily married. They also made clear that for them what happens in the bedroom was directly related to how they were treating one another outside the bedroom. Making love was not separate from the rest of their daily interactions but a natural extension of them. Making sure that each felt like a top priority through large and small acts of caring is what many said fueled their sexual passion. In this regard many husbands said feeling appreciated by their wives was crucial. Wives said feeling understood by a husband who takes time to listen attentively was a major sexual turn on.

Having a mutually happy sex lie is also an important indicator that there was very little, if any, unexpressed anger present in these relationships. Accumulated anger kills love and passion quicker than anything else. And this is true for both men and women.

Sharing a Sense of Humor - Playing Together - Being able to laugh at themselves, seeing humor in many of life's daily hassles and being able to play together was of prime importance. Laughing together was one of their most favorite things to do. Each cherished their partner's ability to make them laugh. Having fun together, trying on each other's favorite activities with a good-natured attitude endeared partners to each other. Being able to laugh at themselves takes the edge off of otherwise tense moments and situations.

A Work In Progress - There was a strong feeling among partners that their marriages were not fixed or finished. All said they felt themselves in an ongoing process of growth and change. There are always areas that need working on. Chief among these was communication, being better listeners.

The crucial aspect of listening turns out to be the quality of attention behind the listening. We all know what it's like to half listen while our own thoughts are going on. This is very common in marriage. Half listening almost always makes for a disconnection because the other person inevitably senses you are only partially there. The result is usually hurt and anger. It may be possible to only half listen in some situations but marriage is not one of them.

True intimacies, that bond of emotional, sexual, mental and spiritual closeness most of us look for in marriage requires hearing both the facts and the feelings behind the facts. Its turning into both that creates the feeling of being fully known, deeply loved and valued. The fact might be "I lost my job today." The feeling might be "I'm scared, good jobs are hard to find." Or, it might be "I'm relieved, I hated being there." Only fully listening will tell you the difference.

Having a happy marriage doesn't just happen it takes a conscious effort to put your best self forward. It takes a generous spirit of loving and giving.

Police Museum at Pigeon Forge, and the Merriweather Lewis site, a tribute to the man, who with Clark did so much to make Easterners aware of the vast possibilities of what the Louisiana Purchase added to the U.S.

And if you still have time, there's always rafting and hiking, communing with nature, and antiquing in the small towns an hour or so from the capital. Some of them have delightful squares to browse your way around all four sides. And for something truly unique, drive out to Shelbyville and check out the Tennessee Walking Horse. Within a few miles you have forty four farms from which to view them, but ask for the one that allows guests to watch the elaborate training that prepares them for their high stepping, haughty pace. They now number over 2,000.

And, just like eastern LI, there are all those horse plank fences, older ones white, newer jet black.

Back in the city, downtown Nashville has a new attraction a merry-go round, more correctly called the Fox Trot Carousel. Here the steeds instead of being traditional horses and other animals are modeled after what is called sculptured tableaux. They feature caricatured resemblances to people and things Tennessean. Some are real people, some like the Bell Witch (a famous poitergeist of the 1800s who haunted the Bell family; are a mix of fact and fiction. There's Davy Crockett, the slave Richard Henry Boyd who established the famed Boyd Publishing House, the first religious publisher owned by an African American; there are catfish, chiggers and Horace Greeley Hill who invented the term cash and carry. Also Foxtrot that sly fox himself.

Although I least expected to find a LI connection at the carousel, this is where I found pay dirt. I got to ride on the steed called Grantland Rice. Fortunately I remembered the devastation wrought on our East Hampton oceanfront by our September 1938 hurricane in the days before hurricanes were named. The waterfront dune home of sports writers Grantland Rice and Ring Lardner were severely damaged. I did not know then that these men were both from Tennessee.

Tennessee – Home Of Country Music

It's fitting that the home of country music has so much country left to enjoy. Tranquil rural landscapes unfold across the state, from the rich black fields along the Mississippi to the lush horse farms of central river valleys to the Appalachian Mountains with their forests and plowed furrows of red dirt.

There are cities, to be sure, but even the largest have a connection with the land that's rare in places of their size. Memphis sprouted from the cotton lands and still shows the signs, and Nashville became famous by marketing the music of the Southern countryside, no matter how much it wanted to be a cultured center of learning.

Where the state seems least rural is in tourist centers like Pigeon Forge and Gatlinburg, where miles of miniature golf courses, amusement centers and motels seem to be intent on overrunning the stoic Smoky Mountains that stand before them. Not to worry, though. The mountains will endure, as will the state's rural charm. Travelers who can appreciate both, or who are interested in the styles of music that have grown so well in the Tennessee dirt, are likely to have a great time in the state.

Long before Elvis, the prehistoric Temple Mound

Builders thrived in Tennessee and other areas of the mid South. Their villages and elaborate earthworks began to dot the region around AD 700, but by the 1600s, their towns had been abandoned. Later Native American tribes to settle in the area included the Cherokee in the eastern part of the state and the Chickasaw in the west.

The site of Memphis was visited by Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto in 1540, and the French built Fort Assumption in the same area in the early 1700s. In the 1770s, English colonists began to settle in the northeastern part of the region that would become Tennessee, many of them coming by way of the Virginia colony. In 1776 Tennessee became a county of North Carolina and soon joined the rebellion against British rule.

After the Revolutionary War was won, the Tennesseans staged a rebellion of their own. They formed the independent state of Franklin, which for four years attempted to function autonomously. The experiment failed, however, and Tennessee joined the Union in 1796.

Once they were in the Union, Tennesseans found it hard to break out: Though the state seceded during the Civil War, thousands of its residents fought for the North. In parts of the state, neighbors found themselves on opposite sides of the conflict. Several major engagements were fought in Tennessee, including the Battle of Shiloh, the Battle of Stones River and some of the battles around Chattanooga. Tennessee was the first state to rejoin the U.S. at war's end.

In the 20th century, Tennessee underwent a physical and economic transformation through the massive projects of the Tennessee Valley Authority. The agency oversaw the construction of a series of dams that tamed the Tennessee River, opening up new land for development, providing inexpensive hydroelectricity for homes and industry and creating lakes for recreational use. Manufacturing would soon overtake agriculture and mining (though both are still important) as the main engine of the state's economy. And, of course, music – especially country music – would not only provide jobs and revenue, but also make Tennessee famous around the world.

Geographically, the western portion of the state is relatively flat, especially along the Mississippi River, while the central region is rolling hills and farmlands. The Appalachian Mountains form the state's eastern border with North Carolina.

"BEYOND BOUNDARIES" AT ELAINE BENSON GALLERY

Being a legitimate critic (versus a "reviewer") means avoiding expressions of attitude (predisposition for or against something). In a nutshell, sentences like "I loved/hated this work" are inappropriate although some writers employ such statements to make a point.

There are times, however, when an exhibit demands a subjective response – a reaction that is not based solely on a critical explanation of the work's significance and how that significance is created/conveyed. "Beyond Boundaries," a show produced by students at The Hayground School, is one salient example. The reason for this analytical shift is not because we can't take children's art seriously – that we can't apply professional standards to legitimize something that isn't "real" art.

Rather, imbuing authentic worth to "Beyond Boundaries" is exactly what the exhibit deserves – worth that's based on a simple subjective statement: "I like it; it's good." (Naturally, this critic can't leave well enough alone: the question must be answered, Why?)

Why? For the same reasons that any work, especially ones by emerging artists, are good. First, the formal qualities are noteworthy in feeling, depth and execution. (However, we aren't suggesting these aspects are perfect.) Consider, for example, the perspective of Virginia Briggs' "Calf," the proportion of Carolina Agudelo's "Sunflower" and Rowenna Chaskey's "Still Life," the composition of Max Barbaria's "Dream Cat" and Jessica Dolan's "Circle of Life," and finally, the colors of Wunetu Tarrant's "Painted Flowers."

And while we're at it, we shouldn't forget attribution of "meaning" to these works, self expression being very much a part of children's as well as adult's art. Complex in their renditions and multi-dimensional in their interpretations are such pieces as Donald Williams' "The Zombie of April 14-16.

Crelin," Tohanash Tarrant's "4 Square on Blacktop with 4s," Noah Salaway's "Red Bird, White Lightning," Justine Engel-Snow's "Painted Bottles With Birds," and Christian Scheider's "4 Square in Air."

The most potent aspect of this exhibit is that most work is non-derivative – which is not something we can say about a lot of "adult" art. While the East End's countryside is known for its pollution-free atmosphere, works by the Hayground School infuse this art community with much needed fresh air.

"Beyond Boundaries" will be on view for one weekend only at Bridgehampton's Elaine Benson Gallery:

"Calf" by Virginia Briggs

HONORING THE ARTIST: SIERRA GUMBS

School rooms are school rooms – they're all alike, right? Not on your life, especially if that room is the place where children create art. Yet even some art spaces can be repressive. Not so at Hayground School, situated in an open field on Mitchell's Lane.

The qualities of spaciousness and freedom on the outside mirror the same sensibilities on the inside, too, where Sierra Gumbs makes her art. As a typical eight-year-old, she joins fellow pupils Paola, Waban, Virginia, and Edyth, who along with teacher Jonathan Snow, are immersed in today's project – painting pictures.

But don't let that simple-sounding endeavor fool you. Creating art is always an opportunity to learn about a lot of other things, from the world at large to oneself. Such chances are never missed by Jonathan. Thus, Sierra's watercolor featuring a small figure caught in the rain (similar to the one she's drawn for this week's cover on Dan's) becomes the spontaneous topic of conversation about water.

Jonathan informs the students that he wants to take them "puddle jumping," where Murphy's Law is the rule rather than the exception. Not many children are familiar with Murphy's Law, but Jonathan quickly fixes that – which leads the pupils to share their own "water" experiences: Paola talks about the torrential rains in Columbia, South America; Virginia recalls a hurricane in Florida; Edyth gets closer to home, and says she likes running in her bare feet through the wet grass.

The subject of water encompasses other dimensions as Jonathan asks the students about their feelings; Does rain become more pleasant on the Shinnecock Reservation, for example, where some of the children live? How would it be different in New York City? Sierra seems to think rain feels good on the reservation, and in fact, her watercolor reflects a jubilant image with hands raised up toward the rain cloud overhead.

Even so, there's something unusual about Sierra's painting. It's only raining where she stands with an umbrella; the other side is clear. Such details are not unique vision. Paola's palm trees also get special attention from Jonathan as he pulls out a book about Saul Steinberg.

The whole class is now looking at Mr. Steinberg's palm trees as well.

Soon after, Sierra returns to her watercolor, answering questions about her favorite colors ("blue and red"), what she does during the weekends ("run around and watch Cartoon Network on TV, but not painting"), her favorite subject ("art"), and what she wants to be when she grows up ("an artist or a doctor").

Finally, we ask what her name, Sierra, means. She draws an image on a piece of paper: a half circle on water. "It means ocean/sky," she explains. What an appropriate symbol for this eight-year-old girl who lives near the sea and loves to draw rain-water.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Sierra Gumbs' cover watercolor, along with other Hayground School

works, will be on exhibit at The Elaine Benson Gallery on April 14-16. The opening is on April 14 (5:30-7PM). See the show, "Beyond Boundaries," reviewed in this week's Art Commentary.

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2000

While some of us are still trying to digest the last Academy Awards and gossiping about whom Oscar went home with that night...some are fraught with dyspepsia while others are happy... uncomfortably stuffed with the whole, winning enchilada. As a remedy, Dan's Papers FREE Film Festival continues to present deliciously worthy and easy to take Academy recognized films. Last week's Annie Hall, that boff-oh! Woody Allen flick, had the Ross School Library filled with chortles and thoughtful chuckles... this week on April 15th, the screening of David and Lisa, a tenderly serious film, will crowd the place with emotion and care.

David and Lisa, is an extremely deliberate portrayal of mentally disturbed teenagers in a therapeutic school where two of the most troublesome young people are drawn together as if to encompass each other with the compassion that the alienated feel denied. David is a seventeen year old... brilliant and arrogant, he is calculatingly exact and formally up-tight. He is demanding and, most disconcerting, he has a morbid fear of being physically touched. Alone, he cries, and sleeping, he has nightmares of clockwork decapitation. Lisa is 15. She is desperately schizophrenic, sharing her being with "Muriel," who speaks only in rhymes. She is childlike and temperamental. With seemingly nothing in common, the two manage to bond emotionally and together attempt to work their way out of their private mazes.

The acting performances of the two leads is uncanny.

Keir Dullea, later to star as the astronaut in 2001: A Space Odyssey, is remarkable in his rigid sensitivity, as David. Lisa, is wondrously fascinating as interpreted by Janet Margolin. Both received numerous awards at festivals here and abroad. Howard Da Silva as the compassionate psychiatrist and also fine.

You will not see the Hamptons physically in this film, but, the film was made by Hampton artists: Producer (and Production Designer) Paul Heller, Director, Frank Perry and his then wife, Screenwriter, Eleanor Parry. Both received Academy Award nominations. The film was derived from the book by Theodore Isaac Rubin, M.D. Excellent, graphic black and white cinematography is by Leonard Hirschfeld and look for the strong conclusion that takes place, ironically atop the steps where Stallone's Rocky took his victory stance.

"Beyond Boundaries" Hayground Students at Benson Gallery

How did renowned artist Donald Sultan learn something new in making his oil painting over tar on linoleum? A group of students from the Hayground School in Bridgehampton, ages eight to fourteen, spent a day working with him in his studio. They taught him a new way of extracting sepia from tar, to use in drawing, because the students experimented with a different kind of tar than he normally used.

The Hayground School is based on a belief in the intellectual integrity of every child, art as a way of life, and the urgency of multiculturalism in every sense. While numerous studies have shown how learning through the arts strengthens children's abilities in all areas of work, the Hayground School is showing what that means in practice.

Under the director of art teacher Jonathan Snow, the students, in small groups of mixed ages, worked closely with various artists and created a body of work.

When Roger Ricco first saw the art created by students at the Hayground School, he knew he wanted to bring their work to his gallery. But, even more, he wanted to work with the school to build an extraordinary Artist-In-Residence program.

Ricco later said, "I've looked at children's art for many years. The children of the Hayground School seem more in touch with their creativity and therefore their work is more consistently powerful and personal than work I've seen before. Who they are and how they perceive themselves - kids from strikingly different communities - is reflected in their art with wonder, passion and seriousness."

The Hayground students were exhibited in New York at the Ricco Maresca Gallery in March. And this weekend their art will be shown at the Elaine Benson Gallery in Bridgehampton.

Back in 1962, The New York Times reviewer wrote, "A gem. A shining work that touches the mind and the heart." Be sure to call 537-0500 for FREE seats. Let's meet and talk about this classic independent film.

To top this off... you will be settled into the library's comfy sofas with a nine minute video from the LTV Studios, as a sort of warmup. It is a very unusual look at "The Artists and Writers Game '1994." The legendary, annual softball game, played by celebrities, is promoted by Lief Hope to help fund local charities. This is just an oblique peek at the event by David Nadel. The opening pitch is at 3 P.M. Be there!

silvia lehrer's cooking column

At sundown, April 19, Jews the world over will celebrate one of their most cherished traditions, the Passover seder. The tale that is told at this ceremonial dinner commemorates the deliverance from slavery as the participants dine on the symbolic foods of the holiday.

Most American Jews are of Ashkenazic, or Eastern European tradition. But Jews from the Mediterranean, or Sephardic Jews, have some different seder traditions in regard to food. The reasons are nothing more than difference in geography and custom. Sephardic meals may integrate earthy vegetables and spices such as paprika, allspice and cumin, which though permitted, are not usually used in the Ashkenazic tradition. Most Ashkenazic Jews lived in a harsher climate and relied on the foods that were available, while most Sephardic Jews lived in a temperate climate and had more to choose from.

Some of the differences also appear on the seder plate, which holds the symbolic foods of the holiday. Symbolizing renewal and rebirth, Ashkenazic Jews include roasted eggs while the Sephardic Jews serve huevos haminados, eggs that simmer for many hours until they are creamy and rich and a beautiful brown color. Both plates contain haroset, a sweet condiment made of apples and nuts which recalls the mortar used by Jewish slaves to build Egyptian cities, but the Sephardic haroset is made with dried fruits, such as dates and raisins with nuts and wine. The Ashkenazim use parsley or celery leaves to dip into salt water versus the Sephardic tradition of dipping romaine lettuce leaves into vinegar; both liquids symbolizing the tears shed by the Jewish slaves. A roasted shank bone is placed on the plate to represent the Paschal lamb that was sacrificed in the temple in both traditions.

Both tables are graced with matzohs, the bread of affliction symbolizing the journey to freedom in memory of the Jews who fled Egypt in such haste that they had no time for their bread to rise. The matzoh is central to the story of Passover.

Here are two recipes in the Sephardic style to place on the seder plate.

HUEVOS HAMINADOS

Huevos haminados are eggs that cook very slowly for many hours. They emerge a beautiful reddish brown color with a rich creamy taste. This uniquely Jewish dish is one of the most ancient dishes of the Mediterranean. It is always included in Sabbath celebrations and appears on other holiday tables such as Passover.

Eggs, enough for each guest for the Passover seder
Red or brown onion skins, or some of both
Square of double or triple layer of cheesecloth
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1. Have the eggs at room temperature. Put them in a deep pot with a tight-fitting lid and enough water to cover the eggs well. Place the onion skins over the eggs and arrange the cheesecloth over the top. Bring to a low boil. Lower heat to the barest simmer your range can handle, cover tightly and simmer for 5-6 hours, checking the water level occasionally.

2. Discard the cheesecloth (can rinse out and reuse) and onion skins. Remove the eggs carefully with a slotted spoon when done and serve warm or at room temperature sprinkled with salt and pepper to taste.

HAROSET

This thick spread of dried fruits, nuts and sweet wine symbolizes the mortar that the Israelites were required to use in the construction of the monuments for the Pharaoh during the time of their slavery in Egypt.

Yield: 2 cups

1/2 cup walnuts
1 cup dried raisins
1 cup dates, without pits
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon allspice
1/4-1/3 cup sweet red wine for Passover

1. Put the walnuts in the bowl of a food processor, fitted with a steel knife and chop finely, or chop coarsely by hand. Transfer to a mixing bowl.

2. Put the raisins and dates in the bowl of the processor, and with quick, on/off pulses, chop coarsely. Scrape the mixture out with a rubber spatula and put into the bowl with the nuts. Season with scant 1/2 teaspoon of each spice and moisten well with the wine to make a thick paste. Can be prepared up to a week or more ahead and stored in the refrigerator in a covered container. The mixture is used to spread on pieces of matzoh at the Passover seder.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

I will never understand how edible plants got labeled as unaesthetic for a landscape. Perhaps people found the rigid rows of a typical vegetable garden unattractive. Yet suburbia is filled with regimented, junipers and yews along many a straight wall or driveway. And an orderly arrangement of fruit trees is no more geometric than a privet hedge or a formal arbor. Some people dislike the unplanted areas that occur during the year in a vegetable garden.

In our experience, the single greatest cause for the demise of an edible landscape is the burden it imposes. The amount of effort needed to sustain a landscape or garden is, perhaps, the single most important design consideration.

Even the best edible landscapes are still much more effort than the best planned ornamental ones. Start small with edibles. Each year you can add more area for edible production if last year's was easily maintained.

We think that the best edible landscapes keep maintenance sensibly low by giving a slightly greater priority to function than to form. We can explain what we mean in the following guidelines.

Note: Streamline your landscape. Not every plant need be edible. In my thirty years of experience, it is best to have no more than fifty percent of the perennial plants be edibles, and no more than fifty percent of the whole yard planted to edibles (unless it is smaller than 2,500 square feet). It takes a special circumstances to make a success of a landscape that is bigger than 1,200 square feet and almost 100% edible. If the yard is greater than 2,500—square feet, you should consider planting as much as eighty percent of the area in wildflower meadow and very carefree ornamental shrubs, which are low-maintenance alternatives to lawns.

Note: Plan to have vegetables close to the kitchen. The first instinct is to put the vegetables way out back, but the farther they are from the kitchen, you will tire of running out to get a salad for supper, and the sooner the garden will be neglected. You don't have to hide organic vegetables, edible landscaping looks pleasing.

Note: Keep the vegetable area small at first. While fruit and nut trees are an important part of any edible landscape, the most frequently used and nutritionally important foods are vegetables. Start small, and lay out an area of only 200 square feet for the first year. For a family of four, leave room in th' plans for the area to grow to 800 square feet.

Note: Make the central vegetable area rectangular. A rectangle uses garden space efficiently and is the best shape for watering by hose and sprinkler. The paths around a rectangle can be curved to soften the transition to less formal plantings. If you use drip-irrigation, other shapes can be considered. But remember that odd-shaped beds and paths are more tedious to care for. Curves are pretty, but straight paths help get the job done.

Notes: At first, choose low care plants. Consider a common requirement in an ornamental landscape, ground cover plantings. The Alpine strawberry, may be planted in a bigger area than either periwinkle. It grows in clumps that does not make troublesome runners. As a ground cover it still requires more water and feeding than periwinkle, but less maintenance. It is a good edible to start with.

Notes: Place herbs and perennial flowers. Perennial herbs and flowers should be grouped by similar water and feeding needs and planted in their own beds or

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Its that time of year again when New York Farm Bureau (NYFB) offers a couple of great opportunities to high school students. Each year, the NYFB Promotion and Education Committee sponsors an "Agricultural Youth Scholarship" for high school juniors. They may live or work on a farm, or be involved with agriculture via any avenue (for example, working at a farmstand, greenhouse, stables, or vineyard). Family Farm Bureau membership is not required. In addition to the application, the candidate must provide three letters of recommendation, a recent photograph (wallet size), and write an essay titled "How Agriculture Affects My Life." One winner will be chosen for the Long Island district, and all district winners will attend the NYFB State Annual Meeting in Buffalo this December to compete for the three scholarship awards - first of $1,000, 2nd of $500, and 3rd of $250. This final judging will be based upon the application, a personal interview and an oral presentation of their essays. Each of the eleven district winners will receive a $50 check, a Certificate and a token gift. Long Island district winners will receive an additional $50 from the LIFB Board of Directors. Not only is this a great opportunity to receive supplemental moneys to further their education, the candidates will have a chance to observe the democratic, grassroots process by which Farm Bureau develops policy at the state level. The deadline for applications to be in our office is June 1st.

Governmental Awareness Institute held each May is another great opportunity offered by NYFB. The Institute is an intense two-day seminar that in the past has enabled students to meet and talk with Governors Mario Cuomo and George Pataki, New York State Senate Majority Leaders, Speakers of the

New York State Assembly, and other statewide leaders. High school juniors with an interest in government would benefit greatly from this experience. Anyone interested in applications should call now, since the deadline for applicants is April 21st.

Farm Bureau encourages all young people to learn about the importance of agriculture, as well as to become involved in our democratic process. Governmental Awareness Day and the Youth Scholarship are two terrific opportunities, so if you know any high school juniors, please pass this along to them! For applications or more information, call Toni in the LIFB offices at 631-727-3777.

borders, not randomly within the main vegetable plantings. Growing perennial plants with annual vegetables usually makes the maintenance more difficult. It is especially awkward to turn the soil for a new planting.

Most of the helpful influence of flowers and herbs lies in their ability to attract beneficial insects, so these plants can be many feet away from the vegetable garden and still have a positive impact.

Note: Plant fruit and nut trees in clusters of similar kinds. Grouping fruit trees according to similar needs for water, organic fertilizer, and natural sprays simplifies their care. When peaches, for example, are scattered throughout the landscape it makes spraying for peach leaf curl with sulfur/copper spray more of a chore. Peaches require much more water fertilizer than apples for healthy yields. If the two are interplanted, the apples are likely to grow more spindly and be more prone to pests because of the fertilizer and water given to the peaches.

Where possible, place fruit and nut trees at least five times their mature height away from the perimeter of the vegetable area so that their roots do not invade the vegetable beds. The trees can become weakened or diseased by the quantities of water and fertilizer needed to keep vegetables happy.

Note: Make it compact. The less distance walked to, the easier it is to manage the edible landscape. Compact plantings mean more variety in less area and less running around to care for everything. Use as many dwarf and miniature fruit trees as possible.

There are more compact vegetable varieties available every year. Now you can buy more than half a dozen types of winter squashes in a bush form. A number of tomato varieties are compact enough to grow in containers. Cucumbers also come in bush form, needing only one third the usual garden space and no trellises.

Note: Plan as many permanent paths as possible. Permanent paths are vital in reducing maintenance. However, you must plan the landscape with fore-thought to avoid having to tear them out one day. Make the paths four foot wide for easy access with a garden way cart. This is especially helpful for applying compost and mulches.

Note: Use only ornamentals for multiple layered plantings. The effect of many different types of foliage at three or four levels, grouped in the same planting is quite striking. And, if you want to have several sizes of fruit or nut trees growing near each other, make sure there is space for walking between each.

No longer are we choosing shrubs based on a two week show of spring flower or sterile trees that don't drop fruit.

Americans are starting to choose landscape plants with year-round interest that provide food for wildlife as well as their families. Gardeners today are growing them because they provide beauty. Combining these two functions creates outdoor settings near their homes to soothe their spirits and it gives them a way to use organic principles in their landscapes.

No Need To Take A Bath On Coordinated Fixtures

Look at the typical bathroom and you will often find a mismatch of different elements. For example, a standard faucet in one type of style or finish, a tub spout, shower valve and showerhead in a different style or finish, and all surrounded by some unmatched towel bars and bath accessories. No wonder bathroom remodeling is currently at an all-time high.

With so many older homes in the Hamptons, this is a good solution, especially with one of the prime stores located in the Hamptons, Alan Court Associates, helping.

And now fortunately, there's now a line of single-handle lavatory faucets, tub/shower fixtures and accessories, all coordinated in one distinctive design. Finishes can also be matched to further facilitate integration.

In addition, these fixtures are available at a price that won't break your budget.

- Functional-The bathroom faucet is sleek and flowing, with increased height to make routine tasks easier.

- Stylish-Even the lift rod complements the smooth, clean lines of the overall collection.

- Ergonomic-The line's lever handles have a special contoured shape to fit the hand.

- Advanced-Shower valves feature popular Posi-Temp pressure balancing system that helps prevent "shower shock" by keeping both water pressure and temperature at consistent levels.

- Reliable-In all the line's faucets, a washerless cartridge system helps ensure that there is never a drip or leak.

- Easy to clean-With no exposed screws, all components of the collection are a breeze to wipe clean with a cloth.

These fixtures come in chrome, polished brass, chrome/brass and white finishes.

For more information about Alan Court & Associates, call 631-324-7497. They are located at 57B Main Street in East Hampton.

Stainless Steel Takes A Shine To Laundry Rooms

Stainless steel, long a favorite material for kitchen sinks, isn't showing up just in kitchens any more. With its great looks and outstanding durability, stainless steel is taking its star qualities into the laundry room and is becoming a favorite in this area of the home.

In recent years, more and more laundry rooms are being built into the living quarters of new homes, enabling homeowners to save steps and time by doing the wash right where the dirty clothes and linens accumulate. New laundry rooms are likely to be spacious, designed with plenty of storage and folding room and appropriate cabinets to store supplies, in contrast to laundry rooms hidden in the basement or garage.

Other beautification trends include appliances paneled to match the room, windows, a pull-down ironing board, soundproofing to reduce noise and a pass-through to the master bedroom or bath. Of course, a spacious utility sink for pre-soaking clothes, arranging flowers or cleaning muddy boots is a necessity.

With laundry rooms taking a more prominent position in the home, the accompanying utility sink is also becoming more visible. Wherever it's located, today's laundry room needs to be versatile and offer areas that are easy to maintain while retaining their good looks. A stainless steel sink fits perfectly into this picture. Stainless steel is extremely durable, much more so than the fiberglass tubs common in yesterday's laundry rooms. Furthermore, stainless steel won't crack, peel or stain.

Stainless steel is easier to keep looking good than any other sink material. You need only rinse the sink after use, and avoid leaving wet sponges, cloths or detergent on the sink surface. Over time, the initial satin finish of a high-quality stainless steel sink will develop a rich patina similar to that of silverware.

Pilates: Another Route To Good Health

As I rang in the new year, the new millennium I felt that since it was such a once in a lifetime moment that I would make not one but two resolutions. The first was to do something to improve both my mental and physical state, the second was to stop procrastinating. By February I had done neither.

Then I heard about a mat class that was being offered teaching the Pilates Method. I've joined gyms in the past, taken aerobics classes and used videos at home. But due to a few physical limitations found them frustrating and ended up just quitting. I did some research and checked with my doctor, who was more than supportive of my decision to sign on for the six week course. He said based on my limitations that these non-weight bearing exercises would be a great way to strengthen and tone without straining my knee, back, or hip.

I attended the first class and was pleased to see all levels of fitness in men and women ranging from mid twenties to mid-sixties. There was a full class of twelve, which I had hoped would allow me to blend into the background as I attempted to master these new exercises. Our instructor Robin, and her assistant Caryn made sure that there was no blending. As we all struggled, some more than others, to go through the series of motions that actually only looked easy, the instructors worked the room making sure all of us were in correct form and using the correct muscle groups.

I found the series to be challenging physically, with most of the moves coming from the abdomen, which they called the powerhouse, and believe me mine had been closed for a while. The exercises also required using your mind. Breathing correctly is crucial and if done correctly actually made the moves easier. Many of the exercises were easily adapted to meet my needs so I always felt like I was part of the group.

After six weeks I can say I feel stronger and more flexible and although I did not master all the moves I left with the tools I needed to continue working towards my goal. Well, that's one resolution, maybe I'll tackle procrastinating next year.

For more information about Pilates mat classes call The In Balance Pilates Studio at 725-8282. A beginner class is forming in April and space is limited.

Hints For Playing Better, More Exciting Doubles

Try a few of these strategies each time you play and watch your doubles game climb to a new level.

Pressure: For my money, doubles is all about pressure. You want to create a sense of duress in your opponents that last the entire match. Your goal is to create and place enough pressure on your opponents so that they attempt or force shots they might not want to attempt otherwise. A great way to do this is to bring your net player into play as much as possible. Let the other team know early on that anything that is hit across the middle your net player is going for it. This is called "poaching" and is very effective. You do this by placing your net player a step or two more to the middle during your first few service games. Make the returner hit a great return. Force mistakes. Even if you miss a few you have succeeded in setting the tone that your team will protect that coveted middle court.

This leads me to my next tip which is Protect The Middle. Let your opponents have the alleys. Even tease them with the alleys. But protect the center. This is where most of the shots in doubles are placed and played, so be there. And please, don't take your partner for granted. Both of you go for everything that comes down

The Power Of Touch

A message not only feels good, it has positive physiological and psychological effects. Massage benefits people with a wide range of health conditions. Anorexics report improved body image; depression sufferers experience mood lifts; the elderly show less signs of senility; arthritics gain mobility; burn victims have reduced pain; autistic children can concentrate; asthmatics breathe easier.

Massage may indeed be medicine but why it's beneficial is still being discovered. Skin, the human body's largest organ, has five million touch receptors that send messages along the spinal cord to the brain. Researchers have found that simple touch, such as a hand on a shoulder, reduces heart rate and lowers blood pressure. Touch also stimulates the brain to release endorphins, the body's natural pain suppressers.

Sustained touch such as massage has an even greater effect. Perhaps most encouraging is the link between regular massage and building the immune system. Massage can also benefit overall health through stress relief. Stress depresses the immune system and causes things to happen in the body to wear it down. Clients have begun to understand that massage goes way beyond pampering.

Physically, massage increases metabolism, hastens healing, relaxes and refreshes the muscles and improves the detoxifying functions of the lymphatic system. It may also promote better circulation of blood and lymph, improving the delivery of oxygen and nutrients to the cells.

Massage also stimulates the vagus nerve, one of the twelve cranial nerves that regulates respiration and gastrointestinal functions. This allows people to respond more readily to their environment.

With evidence clearly pointing to the many health benefits of massage, it's surprising that more people aren't taking advantage of these services.

the center.

If you had to pick one thing and only one thing that winning doubles teams have and losing teams don't have, it would have to be Communication. Successful teams always know the whats, wheres, whens, and hows of their teammates. They do this with communication. If your partner knows you want to poach on this next return of serve, he will know to keep his serve on the center line. If your partner knows you will lob this next return of serve, she will know to play back a little. Whether it's with hand signals or just talking over strategy in-between points, knowledge of your partners intentions are a huge factor in winning doubles.

Other hints that will make a difference in your game are use a chip return of serve wide and short. This forces the returner to hit up to get the ball over and brings your partner into the play. It will also open up the middle of the court for an easy put-away. Use variety on your return of serves. As soon as possible in the match try a passing shot down the line. Try a lobe over the net mans head. Or smack a hard groundstroke at the net man. Your goal here is to let that net man know that you are willing and able to go anywhere you want with the return. This will tend to keep him at home and not get too close to the middle of the poach.

Ask your certified instructor to review these hints with you and your partner. Ask him/her to arrange a "Controlled Match" for your team. This will allow him/her to stop play and discuss with you the finer points of competitive, strategic doubles. I have found this method of controlled matches and points to be a very productive and fun way to learn.

So please remember, tennis may be tennis, but there is a mental, a competitive, and a strategic difference between singles and doubles. Understanding these distinctions might just change the way you think about your next match.

POLICE BLOTTER

A Sag Harbor man was extradited to Florida last week for allegedly drowning two cats. Peter Albert Costanza, fifty-one, of Sag Harbor and formerly of Collier County, Florida, was arrested by Suffolk County Police on a bench warrant for failing to appear before a Florida judge. Costanza is accused of luring two cats, Buddy and Ozzie, to his swimming pool and drowning them. He was charged with two counts of animal cruelty, a third degree felony punishable with up to five years in jail. The bench warrant was issued after Costanza failed to appear at a competency hearing to evaluate his mental condition. The Humane Society provided Cosatnza's whereabouts to the Collier County Sheriff, who then contacted the Suffolk County Police.

Edward P. Curry, forty-four, of Montauk, who was arrested previously for carrying a police scanner in his car and modifying his license plate, was charged with misdemeanor harassment on March 29. The prior arrest came after Curry stopped Frederick Hoffman on the Napeague stretch for speeding. Hoffman pulled over thinking Curry was a police officer. According to police, Curry followed Hoffman to work on the morning of the 29. This came after Curry followed Hoffman into the parking lot of the Shark Shack on Embassy street in Montauk, pulled alongside him and took his picture, according to police. Curry was arrested at the Tipperary Inn where he works. He was later released on $500 bail.

An East Hampton resident returned home after a five-week vacation and found her screen doors ripped. The only missing items were a bicycle and two cases of vodka from her backyard shed.

A Montauk man returned to his home on Second House Road to find three teenagers on his tennis court playing tennis and skateboarding. He did not to press charges.

A bar brawl shut down Bootleggers in Greenport last Saturday. According to Southold Police, the brawl started when Keith Zurek, twenty-seven, of Greenport, allegedly hit another man over the head with a bottle at 1:15 a.m. The bottle did not break, so he hit him again. The victim was transported to Eastern Long Island Hospital, treated and released.

About an hour later, a fight broke out between Greenport and Riverhead patrons. An officer on patrol saw about twenty to twenty-five people fighting outside the bar, and another 100 people trying to run away, according to police. Police units were called in, as well as two off-duty officers. The seven responding officer took 45 minutes to clear the area, and no arrests were made, as the instigators fled, according to police.

Bootleggers has been reported to the State Alcohol and Beverage Commission by one Southold Police officer because, according to the officer, the establishment had 100 to 150 people inside with no security to handle such brawls.

An employee at South Fork Realty in Hampton Bays was locking up for the evening. When she went to lock the bathroom window, she felt somebody push the door closed from the other side. She fled and flagged down a police officer, who spotted William J. Black, thirty-eight, of Hampton Bays, allegedly leaving through the window. When told to freeze, he allegedly hid in the bathroom until a police K9 unit removed him. Black was charged with attempted burglary in the third degree.

A wiley woodsman attacked a group of eight trees in Water Mill, a man told police. The resident told police that over the last few weeks, an unknown assailant made a deep cut around the bases of said trees. An arborist said that the trees will most likely die as a result of their wounds.

A Northwest Landing woman complained that her cleaning woman helped herself to a $40,000 gold watch, as well as two rings, $500 in cash and a silverware set valued at $7,500. The items were stashed in various locations throughout the house.

Dan's LETTERS

VIVA FIDEL

Dear Dan,

Thank you for writing a fair story on your recent trip to Cuba.

Seldom does information for North American consumption come out of that misrepresented nation that is without spin, prejudice, and frequently, down right big lies.

I first went to Havana some four years ago because I doubted the official story I had been reading for some 35 years, wanting as a free American to see it for myself with unfiltered lenses. I did just that and subsequently went back another three times over three years, talked to many people, listened, traveled all over, listened some more, read and studied alot (I have sent under separate cover some books and a manuscript you may find informative) and have come to similiar conclusions as yourself.

But my emotional affect is rather stronger than you evidence in your story, particularly as to the blockade, which is always refered to as "embargo" because it is a softer word, on food and medical equipment and medicines. In my book, to use food and medicine against 11 million men, women and children is immoral, unethical and illegal; and although there is solid, overwhelming support in the Congress to repeal this aspect of current hostile Cuban legislation, it has been stopped by a small, rich, powerful group of Cuban-American Miami based people who appear to care less about "democratic process and the rule of the majority," are concerned not with restoring democracy (as if there had been anything like democracy for the majority of Cubans for five hundred years!) but rather with restoring themselves to power under the happy gaze of their Uncle Sam.

These are the same group of people, who have cynically used our great judicial system to block the compelling case for the return of a young child Elian Gonzalas, to his father and loving family. Their power is such it would seem that although over 70% (NBC poll) of Americans want the child returned, knowing very well what is ethical, moral and what is legal, and inspite of the rulings of the INS, the expressed opinion of the Attorney General, members of Congress and the President, they still prevail as of this writing.

In closing, I must take exception to two of your points: "Castro reneged on paying the middle class and the wealthy for the things he took from them in the 60's", and, your wish that "Fidel" would retire now, "and then insist that multi-party elections take place soon there-after.

Little known to most Americans, however, the new revolutionary Cuban government did offer to pay all individuals and corporations doing business and owning property in Cuba which were taken over in those first years. They were offered full value, payable in four percent interest bearing bonds spread over years. Those persons and corporations who had illegally acquired wealth and property under the dictatorship of Batista were not offered compensation, and although all other foreign nationals and corporations did accept payoffs with the revolutionary government, no American firm or person did simply because they were not permitted to do so by the US Government. Still today, there are many American interests that want to be paid, the Cuban's are still willing, but not allowed to settle by their very own government. As to your call for "multi-party elections": we tend to talk a lot in America about the "form" of democracy, yet not very much about its "content", nor do we speak of democracy for the majority in contrast to it for a minority. When people do not have adequate shelter, food on the table, clothing to wear, a doctor to consult, a school to attend, with no safety in the street, exposed to racial discrimination and para-military killers, and they are given the choice of voting for one of two men from two different parties in power, neither one of whom is willing or able to do a damn thing for them, I submit to you they do not have democracy yet they indeed have its form which is essentially a fraud. But make it possible, as the Cubans have done, to achieve universal health care for all free (65,000 Cuban doctors and still counting), achieve universal literacy, achieve universal education to the highest levels free, electrify the entire countryside, provide potable water for all, and yes, provide enough food for all, without favor, have everyone own their own home, then you have some of the content of democracy.

Furthermore, you will have a people who will fight to the death to maintain it, and they will fight, make no mistake, for they are an armed nation. Every military aged adult, just like the Israeli population, are organized into armed militias throughout the country. And yes, they rose up at the Bay of Pigs but not exactly in the direction the CIA had predicted. Just imagine the reaction to the suggestion to almost all Latin American governments that they should arm their "loyal" citizens!

You, sir, are a good, clean, honest journalist who calls it the way you see it -unafraid. But you are apparently as ignorant of the electoral processes (content) in Cuba as myself, having little or no knowledge of the elections of 1997-1998, and for very good reason: our news media did not cover those elections, nor did our Secretary of State, a very busy little lady all over the world, make any reference of praise or condemnation whatsoever. Those elections were a non-event to Americans, down the memory hole; but within the one-party system developed painstakingly by the Cubans themselves without answering to anyone, Dan, a democratic structure uniquely rising from the Cuban experience dating back to 1868. There is an extraordinary, vibrant, participatory democracy involving over 95% of the entire population of voting age 16 years and up, full suffrage, one person, one vote and a gun.

In fact, believe it or not (and most will not) Fidel himself must - yes, must - be elected in secret ballot in his small constituency to become eligible for higher office, to which he is once again elected by secret ballot which can either be left blank or defaced, if the voter objects.

Far from being the benign dictator, loved by all' you portray and imply, Fidel Castro, as are all the 600 odd elected members of the national assembly, is the best of the best in the entire country, that's why he is there, that's why they are in the assembly. There will be no chaos, no uprising, when Fidel Castro passes from the scene: a great stratagist, yes; a great orator, yes; a great humanist, yes; a deeply religious man, yes; a great dictator, no.

Abraham Lincoln is one of Castro's great men of history because of the emancipation of millions. Fidel must identify with that because he has acted on the belief that 'he who betrays the poor betrays Christ'. He also clearly believes in government of the people, by the people, and for the people because that is what exists right now in Cuba.

Thank's again for clean reporting, you're always a pleasure to read.
